FCTV CLASS REUNION

The months of November and December are typically the time when class reunions are held. FCTV Executive Director Debra Rogers thought, if high schools and colleges can do it, why not FCTV? So here is a look at where some former FCTV staff members are now...

| My career in Access Television all started when Deb Rogers hired me in a part time position while I was attending Massachusetts Communications College in Boston. I would be remiss if I did not mention Nancy Richard, E.D. at PACTV who I met at a job fair as I was enrolled at Mass-Comm-College as she recommended me to Deb. I guess everyone at some time in their life has had the feeling of, “this is just meant to be!” This is exactly how I felt through the whole series of events that led me to work with the great staff at FCTV, to eventually landing at my present position. In addition to Deb Rogers I have to mention Russ Hannagan and Steve Ruiz who without their collective experience, knowledge and willingness to take me under their wing, my climb up the access ladder would have been a longer and more difficult one.

That ladder has raised me to the position of E.D. at Sandwich Area Community Access Television which I have held since October of 2002. I began working at SACAT in a part time technical role while simultaneously working part time at FCTV. That lasted about 14 months. Working both jobs was a welcome challenge and the rewards that I would reap later made all the long hours and hard work more than worth it. I don’t mind patting myself on the back when I say SACAT under my watch has been very successful and once again I must say I owe much of it to my experience at FCTV.

My decision to leave FCTV when I did was not an easy one, actually it was a bit of a gamble, but my success is proof that I made the right decision for myself and my future. I would like to thank all at FCTV who had an impact on the shaping of my future in access television and I feel fortunate to have had the experience of working with people who cared enough to help me along the way.

<th>Litza Brown - Former FCTV Office Manager</th>

| Since leaving FCTV in 2000, I quickly integrated myself back into the Access Television Scene. Not long after purchasing our home and settling in Cumberland, Maine, I accepted a job as the Assistant to the Town Manager of the Town of Cumberland. There, I assisted in enacting the Town’s Government Access Channel 3. A slow process, I brought ideas to the Board and inaugurated their electronic bulletin board as well as updated the programming system to air the Town’s Government and School meetings. I became the Town’s Television Director/Producer. It didn’t take long for my name to get around; the Town of Yarmouth took me on to head up the Town’s Government Access Channel as well.

In 2004, my husband Dan received military orders to transfer two hours north to Rockland Maine to be the Commanding Officer of the Coast Guard Station Rockland. As difficult as it had become for him to commute, we sold our home in September of 2006, knowing that we will be transferring again to a destination unknown in spring/summer of 2007. We are now living in Rockland. I recently chose to resign as the commute for me posed inadequate access to my job. That didn’t stop me though, from involving myself into the community. Although, not working for a paycheck, I work full-time as a volunteer with the Patriot Guard Riders; a national motorcycle organization that was formed a little over a year ago to honor our fallen heroes. I am now one of Maine’s Veteran Services Coordinators; I organize events to support recently returned Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans as well as other previous war Veterans. As a Patriot Guard Rider invitee, I also ride my own Harley to attend Fallen Heroes funerals and honor them and their families. What brought this new avenue of volunteerism is our own son enlisted in the U.S. Army as a Cavalry Scout in 2005; thus bringing to light the needs to support our troops abroad. Our son Dana was also an FCTV crewmember of a few shows back in his teen years when I was employed there. Dana recently returned from a one-year hardship tour in South Korea serving with the United Nations Honor Guard. He also served in missions in the Phillipines, Japan, Thailand and Afghanistan. He now is stationed with the 16th Cavalry Regiment at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

Jason Crow - Former FCTV
Production Coordinator

I am currently the Access Coordinator at the Cambridge Community Television in Cambridge, MA. Starting in June of 2005 at CCTV, I have been running the education program and has developed several new classes on new media methods and literacy including Podcasting, Videoblogging, Gender & Media, Digital Audio for Post Production, Project Documentary and others. Along with running classes and making documentaries, I helped organize the Emerging Media track at the Alliance for Community Media's 2006 International Conference and Trade Show. In January of 2007, I will be taking on a new role at CCTV as On-line Community and Technology Coordinator in order to develop CCTV's web presence and interactivity. Visit http://cctvcambridge.org/classes for more information on my education program or check out my latest documentary on Citizen Journalism at http://projdoc.blip.tv/.

On a more personal note, I married Lisa Ward in September of 2005 in Grand Haven Michigan, near his hometown. My wife and I reside a stone's throw from the Charles' River in East Cambridge. We love their new home, but we sure do miss Falmouth Community Television, its members and the Falmouth community (especially the beach!).

Natalie Fearing - Former FCTV
Office Manager

Well, there really isn't much to tell. A few months after leaving FCTV, I became pregnant - surprise!! A year later we moved to the Vineyard. We absolutely loved it and were there for a year. But with both of our parents needing more and more help, we found that the constriction of getting on and off the Island was too much. So John got a job in Ware, and we moved to Brimfield. We are 3 miles away from the Flea Market, and our house is next door to a horse farm. We're 10 minutes away from John's mother, and 1 hour away from my dad.

I have been busy raising Julia. She is 2 1/2, brilliant, beautiful, and very, very strong minded!!!! At the end of the day I can't always say what we did, but boy am I exhausted! I never expected to have a child, but I can't imagine my life without her. I can't tell if she's keeping me young or making me old (I'm turning 40 in January - can you imagine?).

Well, that's what I've been up to - can you feel the excitement? I want to say hello to everyone at FCTV and wish you all a happy holiday season!

- Natalie Fearing -

Russ Hannagan - Former FCTV
Training & Operations Manager

Life After FCTV. Is there such a thing? Well yes. Granted there's no surf and sand in East Bridgewater but there are other fascinating things here; Like cows, sheep, and horses. For a former "Northern Jersey Boy" to be this close to livestock is wild. I guess what amazes me the most about East Bridgewater is that there are huge tracts of land that just sit there doing nothing. No one is rushing in to develop them.

Again, for someone who used to live on Cape Cod like me it was a shock. East Bridgewater is a small farming/suburban community in southern Massachusetts. Though most people find it difficult to find on a map, the residents somewhat enjoy the anonymity. Kids ride their bikes to the skateboard park while Mom's attend the PTO Meetings. Dads take their Kids trick or treating while grand parents head over to the Senior Center to watch a movie or take the "Senior Van" to the Mall.

The Town Hall is an old converted summer home from the 1850's with a recent extension added on and the Police station is attached to the basement floor. Rumor has it the old building is even haunted. The High School is next door with the Public & Educational Access TV

Center located within. It's small but the producers don't seem to mind.

So I guessed you say that I am NOT living La Dulce Vita. I am living a simpler life where the Fire Chief and Police Chief are my friends and the Chief Town Administrator is a huge fan of Batman and the Green Hornet.

I keep busy though by teaching High School Students TV Production in the Day, along with an extra curricular Club that meets after school. In the evenings I works with the Artists Guild, cover Selectmen Meetings (we only have three Select people) and School Committee Meetings. I edit "Fall Festivals," direct TV shows and covering "Junior Miss Pageants."

It's not the most exciting life but I enjoy it because I feel like I am part of the community. I guess the only weird thing is when people walk up to me the street and act as if they have known me their whole lives.

Did I mention the Selectmen Chamber is so small that the control room I work at is located within? Every once in a while folks see the back of my head on TV or they hear a Selectperson say "Oh and Russ will put that notice on the CBB for us." From just that people think I'm a permanent fixture. I know it's weird but I kind of enjoy it.

FCTV EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR DEBRA ROGERS RECEIVES LEADERSHIP AWARD

On November 17, 2006 at the ACM NE Region Fall Conference & Video Festival Awards, FCTV Executive Director Debra Rogers was presented with the 2006 Chuck Sherwood Leadership Award in recognition of her leadership within the NE Region of the Alliance for Community Media. She graciously accepted the award with a speech that began with a promise not to make it a long trip down memory lane.

She talked about her decision to major in television and how she was swept into not just a career, but a movement in working to defend the first amendment and Public Access TV. She also talked about lobbying at the statehouse and the journey of serving the Alliance for Community Media first on the Massachusetts Chapter, then the NE Region and ultimately the National Board. Debra mentioned and acknowledged many individuals who have become more than just colleagues or friends, they have become like family.

It is a special honor for her to receive this award as Chuck Sherwood is a mentor to Debby. Stay tuned to FCTV for full coverage of the award presentation. Also, Debra’s full speech will soon be available on our website www.fctv.org.
